HD Foam
3D Printed PLA
Personal Project

This is a costume created for the most recent Dragon Con. It is an attempt at translating the Hollow Knight, designed by William Pellen, the titular character and final boss of a game by the same name, into the real world in such a way that it would be possible to wear.

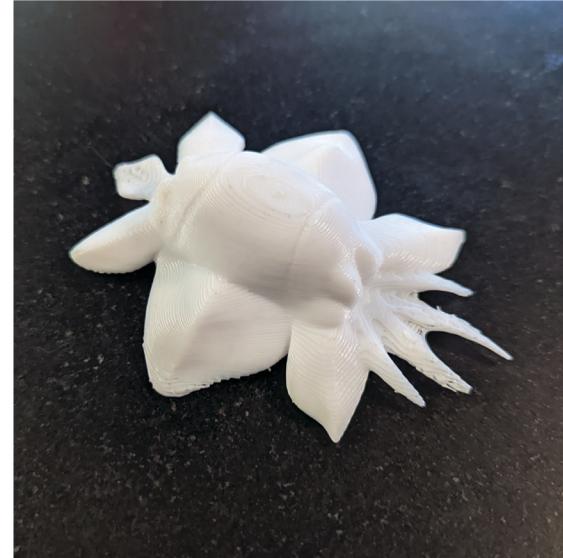

The sword and helmet were made from foam in order to be light. However more rigid materials were used internally to insure adequate structural integrity.
